If the expenses of direction and management be taken at 32,000/. we shall have D 32,000 d By comparing this result with that obtained from the Belgian railways, we have a striking example of the effects of a great amount of traffic on the cost of transport. In the case of the Belgian railways, the mileage of the vehicles of transport was only a little more than 17 millions; while on the North-Western Railway this mileage was 60 millions. While the proportion of the mileage of the vehicles of transport was, therefore, greater on the North-Western Railway, in the ratio of 60 to 17, the expenses of direction and management were greater only in the proportion of 32 to 30; and we find, accordingly, that while the share of these expenses chargeable per mile on each vehicle on the Belgian lines was nearly d., the share chargeable on vehicles per mile on the North-Western lines was less than. //. In order to be enabled to form an estimate of the cost of direction and management of a projected railway, it would be necessary to determine some relation between this class of expenses and some determinate element of the railway establishment. It has been proposed to express the expenses of direction and management by reference to the length of the line worked, by stating them at so much per mile. Such a mode of estimation implies that every augmentation made in the length of the line...
